

British Leader Warns Against Rash Promises

Writing as he speaks, Winston Churchill, dynamic personality of British politics, adviser, statesman, economist, has contributed an article to the London Sunday Chronicle in which he gives his views on many of the economic "cure-alls" offered for present day consumption. "Work and good will are still the keys that unlock the doors of wealth. The specious promises of the prophets of an unearned plenty are a mirage which bedoms and lures us, not to the millennium city, but into the deserts of disillusion and ruin. And perhaps we shall even lose our liberties on the way," he warns. In line with its policy of economic thought, this newspaper reproduces the article herewith. It is worthy of careful perusal.—EDITOR.

Forceful

ALTHOUGH we are assured that the age of miracles is past, no one has suggested that the credulity of mankind has diminished. Science, communication and travel have merely directed it into new channels. Everywhere we find the belief freely held by millions that some great miracle is going to open where work will do itself or almost do itself, and where something for nothing is the order of the day. No doctrine is more unpopular, no counsel is more resented than the contradiction of these day-dreams. Nevertheless, I adhere to the school of those who believe that governments cannot make nations rich, that wealth is gathered only by individual exertion and enterprise, that State expenditure must almost always profligate and waste.

The more freedom enjoyed by the citizen and the less the power of the State, the higher will be the standard of the public well-being. It is no way to improve the lot of the citizen and the nation by the means of the State, but by the means of the individual. It does not seek to limit our consumption, but to make it more useful and more profitable. It is weak and poor, not to relieve wealth from its obligations to the nation's necessities.

IN our island we have achieved a very high degree of wealth and civilization, but too grievously hampered enterprise. All our experience shows, however, that it is not to take more than half the income and capital of citizens, however rich, for the very purpose of the tax collector's pen.

The idea that property can be won by chasing millionaires is one of the most foolish and most foolish of modern popular delusions. Other extravagant hopes are Continued on Page 10, Col. 2

WAINWRIGHT NOT BOUND USE OPTION

Mr. Justice Ford Gives Ruling in Gas Franchise Dispute

Town of Wainwright is not compelled to take up its option to buy the equipment of the Wainwright Gas Co. Ltd. if it refuses to renew the company's franchise on expiration at Dec. 31, 1938, Mr. Justice Ford said in a supreme court judgment handed down Thursday.

The case was brought to court by the two parties agreed to seek a judge's opinion on their positions regarding the terminating agreement.

Paul D. Maclean, K.C., represented the town of Wainwright, S.W. Field, K.C., the Wainwright Gas Co.

FOLLOW-UP LETTERS

The company's contract to supply gas to the town was entered into on July 22, 1923, expiring July 22, 1933, the time limit allowed under the Town Act, was renewed up to December 31, 1938.

The court judgment followed a letter from the town refusing to renew the company's contract and suggesting that negotiations be made to purchase the pipe lines and appliances in the town at a salvage value, but not the eight-mile transmission line from the town.

The company replied that the town must buy all the equipment if it would not renew the contract. Mr. Justice Ford held that the contract automatically expired December 31, 1938, and that the town could renew, buy or put in its own gas service, being under no obligation to buy the company's equipment.

His Lordship ruled that the parties to the contract had no right to force the price of the equipment to be paid for the gas service, but that the town could buy it at a price it must take up its option to renew the price.

The judge also ruled that, if the town decided to buy the company's equipment, it must buy all of it, including the transmission line from the town.

Africa has more potential water power than any other continent, but its many waterfalls are so isolated that they are of little or no use.

Hollywood Gossip

INTIMATE GLIMPSES AND INSIDE STUFF ON THE MOVIE COLONY

By PAUL HARRISON

MOVIE stars are perching on palm branches, giving parties and yelling "Slide, Toot, slide!" these warm summer evenings.

Reason: Modern counterparts of the old Blonnie Girls have taken over the movie sets, and the current Hollywood craze.

The "softball league" plays outdoors, with indoor baseball, and persuade Ben Turpin to come out of retirement and do the umpiring.

Plans are afoot to bring up a brown-skinned female team from Los Angeles. With swing music, Max Factor, the makeup czar, has started collecting a squad of colored girls to play the blonde. Little wooden platforms may be substituted for the base bags, and when a star reaches first base, she is to be greeted by a platoon of "bodyguards" and

escorted to the dressing room.

Under floodlights, Gals in scanty

uniforms smoke home runs, fight with the masculine umpires, call

time for new-powdered hair and

and then take the rest of the game.

The curve is by no means confined to getting and the violently

parties fans find the short-circuit

players very easy to watch.

Joe Penner has an outfit called the Quakers. Eager Kennedy, the comedian, has his name in the Quakers. And Bing Crosby has bought uniforms for the Crooners.

Big girls have taught his players

how to box-honk the umpires.

Male teams are sponsored by film stars. But O'Brien has a quack. Director and S. V. Dyke's

name appears on the jerseys of another team. Several customers

have been identified as Greta

Garcbo, but the real Garbo is said to have escaped detection in the disguise of a peanut vendor.

Harpo Marx attends occasionally

and speeds up the game by chasing

the cutes around the bases.

Most of the players are would-be athletes, and the league against the Kulaks and Croonerettes.

One of these days you may be reading that Sluggo Crawford has won a game with a drive over the left field fence, or that Lefty Harlow pitched a no-hit error in a moment dived with Curves Detroit.

Story by HAL COCHRANE Pictures by GEORGE SCARBO

The lightning flashes whizzed about and, one by one, they faded out. A little moonbeam then appeared and asked, "Can I stay here?" "Please, Mister Thunder, don't chase me. I'll be as good as I can be. I have been lightning lots of times. Of it I have no fear," said Old Thunder answered, with a smile. "Well, you can stay, here for the way. Just shoot some zigzag flashes out and I will do my act."

Quite more the wands were raised in air. "Now, don't let this give you a scare," said Thunder. Then the lightning streaks shot out. My, they cracked!

* * *

One streak was like some steel. "Hurry," the moonbeam cried.

a while. If you do me a favor
that will please the Tymnites.
So far, they really have proved wonderful at listening to what I can rave. It is apparent they are thrilled whenever I see new lights."

"Just name it," said the moon-beam. "I will do my very best to obey your commands." She added,
"Maybe it will be real fun."
"Of course it will," snapped
the boy. "You are going to help me just how to walk up steps of this thing! It's stunts quite easily!"

The moonbeam laughed and said,

on my way." The Times watched him run right up and gaily wave
his hand.

He stood and calmly looked around, and then came right back to the ground. "Why don't you try?" he exclaimed. "It was just grand!"

Wee Seouty said, "Thanks, just what I needed." He turned and went. Another moonbeam joined and the first and they dropped in front of him.

"Oh, Thunder, it would be just like you to make them shine so brightly," they pleaded. "You have been here long enough, so leave us."

Curious World By William Ferguson

The beaver, at one time, was found in the northern parts of both hemispheres. It was common in Europe, and even made its home in the Thames river. Today it is extinct in Europe, but for a few animals preserved in Scandinavia and Poland.
